As a hands-on leader, you will drive the development and implementation of programs, collaborations, and community development activities to support women and their families to develop skills and personal capacity to participate in the labor market sustainably.

Further, this role will work with team members and direct leader to develop and implement strategies to support BIPOC women and their families to participate in leadership skill development to develop the financial, social, and human assets needed to sustainably influence the workforce.

WHAT MOVES YOU

- New opportunities and innovative approaches to improving the lives of women and their families
- Enhancing the socio-economic well-being of Calgarians
- Contributing to the resilience and abilities of women and their families to thrive in strong, caring communities

WHAT YOU'LL DO

- Participate in creation of program activities and outcomes, support client goals in education, essential life skills, personal finance, and employment skills.
- Ensure timely and effective implementation and follow-up of program projects, and activities.
- Supervise direct reports, provide program and operational support, guidance and feedback to team members implementing WEE activities.
- Monitor progress toward program outcomes with supporting data collection, documentation and reporting.
- Collaborate with all stakeholders to learn new and best practices and apply them to continually improve the program.
- Identify, build and grow employer partnerships, assisting clients and building community capacity.
- Coordinate with community advocate agencies to establish an integrated, community approach service delivery model.

WHAT YOU'VE DONE

- Undergraduate degree in human services, management, social work, gender studies, or relevant field preferred.
- Familiarity with survivor-centered services and trauma-informed care required.
- 3-5 years of experience leading teams.
- 5+ years working in non-profit sector, including economic empowerment and/or wellness, case management, or coaching strongly preferred.
- Strong written and oral and interpersonal communication skills.
- Strong facilitation and presentation abilities to a variety of audiences.
- Proven diplomatic, collaboration, and networking skills: the ability to effectively lead a variety of internal and external relationships required.
- Solid organizational skills with the ability to juggle multiple tasks, set priorities, effectively manage time, and meet deadlines required.

If you want to work to change lives, we want to meet you.
